The courses in history are divided into three groups:

A. Introductory courses 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, and 10 are for undergraduates, and may not be counted toward advanced degrees in history. Courses 1, 5, 6, and 10 are the courses open to freshmen. Students may take only one of these freshman courses for full credit (three credits each semester) since each contains introductory training for which credit ought not to be given twice; but if they have had or are taking one of these courses for full credit, another may be taken without the supplementary reading and topical report for two credits each semester. Students not registered in the College of Letters and Science may take any of the introductory courses for two credits each semester. Students are advised not to neglect advanced work in the attempt to cover all of the introductory courses.

B. Advanced courses 100 to 167 continue, in the direction of greater specialization, the work begun in the introductory courses. They may be elected by students who have the necessary preparation.

Courses 90 and 91 are primarily for students who expect to teach history in a secondary school. Seniors completing a major or a teaching minor in history will be regularly admitted to these courses. Other seniors and graduates will be admitted only by special permission.

C. Courses 252 to 262 are open only to graduate students.

The History Requirement for Graduation

When history is offered as one of the required studies in the general course leading to the degree of bachelor of arts (see page 139), the requirement must be satisfied by a continuous three-credit course extending through two semesters.

The Major in History

Thirty credits in history (including, for upper group students, a thesis, four credits), are required for an undergraduate major in history and must include: (a) One introductory course in European and one in American history, and (b) At least twelve credits in advanced courses.

The Teaching Major in History

The teaching major in history requires a minimum of thirty-eight credits, which must include courses 10 and 1 for an aggregate of ten credits; course 2 for four credits; course 4 for six credits; advanced courses (including, for upper group students, a thesis, four credits) to the amount of sixteen credits; and course 90.

The Master’s Degree in History

Candidates for the master’s degree in history who have completed an undergraduate major in history in this University, or its equivalent elsewhere, are required, in their year of work for the degree, to do one-half their work (e. g., a three-hour lecture course and a seminar, both throughout the year), in advanced history, and to write an acceptable thesis. They are permitted to complete their programs, from advanced courses in history or related subjects. Other candidates for the master's degree in history will be required to concentrate their work more fully, or exclusively, upon history. Every candidate for this degree is expected to have had, as undergraduate or graduate, at least one advanced course in European and one in American history.

The thesis requirement is waived in the case of a student holding undergraduate Thesis Honors in the University of Wisconsin, and may be waived by vote of the Department in cases of students recommended to continue for the doctor's degree. Candidates will be admitted to the oral examination for the master's degree only in case the grades in all courses taken the previous semester (or summer session), were good or above.

The Doctor's Degree in History

Candidates for the degree of doctor of philosophy must be prepared by undergraduate studies to undertake advanced work. If they are not sufficiently ready in their preparation (taking a minimum undergraduate major in history as a basis for judgment), the deficiency must be made up during the first graduate year, without counting toward the higher degree.

The award of the doctor's degree is based upon the preparation of a thesis and examination in seven fields, two of which must lie outside the department.

The thesis must be based upon individual research, and must be presented in good literary and formal form for the approval of the reading committee, at least thirty days before the candidate is admitted to his final examination.

Two examinations are required for the doctor's degree. The preliminary examination must be taken at least seven months in advance of the date at which the degree is expected to be awarded. It is designed to demonstrate the extent and soundness of the candidate's preparation over all of the seven fields described below, and to serve as a basis for his further studies. Admission to the candidacy for the degree will be based upon this examination.

The preliminary examination may, at the discretion of the department, be accepted as final over any of the fields included within the major and minor fields offered, but not including the thesis or the thesis field.

The final examination will include the thesis and the thesis field and all of the other fields presented by the candidate that have not been eliminated at the preliminary examination.

The seven fields upon which the candidate will be examined are as follows:

1. Historical Method and Historiography, including a knowledge of the lives and writings of the great historians, and required of all candidates.

2-5. Four fields comprising the major subjects, from the following list: Ancient History, Medieval Europe, Modern Europe, England, American Colonies, United States.

6-7. Two fields comprising the minor subject, ordinarily to be selected from those offered in economics, law, philosophy, or political science; but fields in other departments may be selected with the approval of the department.
