The courses in history are divided into three groups:
A. Introductory courses 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, and 10 are for undergraduates, and may not be counted toward advanced degrees in history. Courses 1, 5, 6, and 10 are the courses open to freshmen. Students may take only one of these freshman courses for full credit (three credits each semester) since each contains introductory training for which credit ought not to be given twice; but if they have had or are taking one of these courses for full credit, another may be taken without the supplementary reading and topical report for two credits each semester. Students not registered in the College of Letters and Science may take any of the introductory courses for two credits each semester. Students are advised not to neglect advanced work in the attempt to cover all of the introductory courses.

2. On leave of absence 1924-25.

B. Advanced courses 111 to 176 continue, in the direction of greater specialization, the work begun in the introductory courses. They may be elected by students who have the necessary preparation.

Course 90 is primarily for students who expect to teach history in a secondary school. Seniors completing a major or a teaching minor in history will be regularly admitted to this course. Other seniors and graduates will be admitted only by special permission.

C. Courses 252 to 262 are open only to graduate students.

The History Requirement for Graduation

When history is offered as one of the required studies in the general course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts (see page 147), the requirements must be satisfied by a continuous three-credit course extending through two semesters.

Major in History

I. General Requirements. The amount of history required for the completion of a major depends somewhat upon the ability of the student, as shown by his capacity to earn grade points. The superior student is released from four credits of work, and is given greater freedom in election than other students. A maximum of forty credits may be elected in History.

II. History Major. (a) For upper group students (see p. 153) the History major requires thirty credits; of which four credits are in thesis; twelve credits are in advanced courses, and fourteen other credits, including an introductory course in European History and one in American History.

(b) For all other students, the History major requires thirty-four credits; of which twelve credits must be in advanced courses; and twenty-two additional credits, including at least a one year course in each of the following fields of History: Ancient, Medieval, Modern European, and American. The requirements as to courses in the several fields may be met with either elementary or advanced courses; but only one of the elementary European History courses may be taken for six credits; additional courses from this group must be taken for four credits only.

III. Teaching Major. Candidates for the teachers certificate will take History 90, The Teaching of History in the High School, 2 credits, in addition to completing the requirements of the major.

IV. Teaching Minor. A minimum of sixteen credits in addition to course 90. These sixteen credits must include at least four in advanced courses.

V. Work in Related Departments. Students taking the History major will be required to take also Economics 1a, and Political Science 7. Geography 4 is recommended to them.

The Master's Degree in History

Candidates for the master's degree in history who have completed an undergraduate major in history in this University, or its equivalent elsewhere, are required, in their year of work for the degree, to do one-half their work (e.g., a three hour lecture course and a seminar, both throughout the year) in advanced history, and to write an acceptable thesis. They are permitted to complete their programs, from advanced courses in history or related subjects. Other candidates for the master's degree in history will be required to concentrate their work more fully, or exclusively upon history. Every candidate for this degree is expected to have had an undergraduate or graduate, at least one advanced course in European and one in American History.

The thesis requirement is waived in the case of a student holding undergraduate Thesis Honors in the University of Wisconsin, and may be waived by vote of the department in cases of students recommended to continue for the doctor's degree. Candidates will be admitted to the oral examination for the master's degree only in case the grades in all courses taken the previous semester (or summer session), were B or above.

The Doctor's Degree in History

Candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy must be prepared by undergraduate studies to undertake advanced work. If they are notably deficient in their preparation (taking a minimum undergraduate major in history as a basis for judgment), the deficiency must be made up during the first graduate year, without counting toward the higher degree.

The award of the doctor's degree is based upon the preparation of a thesis and examination in the following seven fields:

1. Historical Method and Historiography, including a knowledge of the lives and writings of the great historians; required of all candidates.

2-5. Four fields comprising the major subjects, from the following list: Ancient History, Medieval Europe, Modern Europe, England, American Colonies, United States.

6-7. Two fields comprising the minor subject, ordinarily to be selected from those offered in economics, law, philosophy, or political science; but fields in other departments may be selected with approval of the department.
