To make an appointment during Prof. Kantrowitz's office hours, sign up on the sheet posted outside 5110 Humanities. To make an appointment for another time, email skantrow@wisc.edu with a list of times you are available on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Teaching Assistant office hours will be announced in class and posted on the course learn@uw page.

I will respond to emails and phone calls to my office as my schedule permits, but I will not respond to questions that can be answered by reading this syllabus.

Adding the Course and Switching Sections
There is no waiting list. If you have not been able to enroll in the course, your only option is to check the online timetable vigilantly and wait for someone to drop. Every year some students are able to enroll this way, but there are no guarantees.

It may be possible for some students to switch from one section to another, but we cannot guarantee that you can switch into any particular section. If you are trying to switch sections, fill out a sheet at the front of the class after the first lecture. DO NOT drop one section of the course and try to add another or you may lose your place in the course.

This is a 4-credit course; there will be no reduction in work for students who choose to earn only 3 credits. If you are enrolled for 3 credits and want to earn 4, do not try to drop the course and re-add it; this will put your spot in the class in jeopardy.

Assignments
"Study Terms" and the Midterm and Final Exams
During most weeks you will be asked to submit 3 or more "study terms" on the reading. You must do this via the "Discussion" link on the course Learn@UW page, no later than midnight of the day before your section meeting. Provide the number of terms indicated and, for each term, a one-sentence definition that explains its "who/what/when/where/why/how." You must also bring a printed copy of your three terms and definitions with you to section for discussion.

These study terms should be major concepts, events, or transformations. For example, when thinking about our first reading assignment, good study terms would include "election of 1800" and "Federalist" but not "Gabriel."

After all of a week's sections have met, the teaching staff will select a number of the terms you generated, supplement them as necessary, and post a final "Key Study Term" list for each reading on the Learn@UW page, under "Course Content." You will be responsible for these Key Study Terms, along with the material on lecture outlines (which will also be posted under "Course Content"), on your midterm and final exams. Note that the final "Key Study Term" lists we post will not include definitions. It is up to you, through your reading and participation in discussion, to develop working definitions of these terms and maintain them.
throughout the semester. We will spend considerable time in section on definitions and how to develop them.

Written work
- All written work must be submitted in hardcopy, 12-point and double-spaced, with reasonable margins, and an accurate word-count at the end of the last page of text.
- All written work (other than study terms), even items submitted via the "dropbox," must have your name and section day/time at the top left of the first page.
- All pages must be securely fastened to one another.
- All written work must be carefully proofread by hand, not just by a spell-check.

We strongly encourage you to make use of the Writing Center, whose resources are available to all students. For more information, see their homepage at: http://www.wisc.edu/writing. To make an appointment for an individual consultation with a member of their staff, call 263-1992.

Assessment
Your final grade will be determined according to this formula:

- Discussion Sections (participation, study terms) 25%
- Assignment #1 ("Gabriel's Rebellion") 5%
- Assignment #2 (Sam Patch) 7.5%
- Assignment #3 (Creole documents) 7.5%
- In-class midterm exam 15%
- Assignment #4 (South vs. South) 12.5%
- Assignment #5 (Looking Backward) 7.5%
- Final exam 20%

Other Matters

Attendance
This classroom is too large for us to monitor your presence or absence in lecture. That said, the TAs will be taking note of persistent absenteeism and factoring it into decisions about whether or not to give you the benefit of the doubt when you are at the cusp of a grade, etc. But: your presence in discussion section is a crucial part of your course grade (25%, including study terms), and you will face significant penalties beginning with the second unexcused absence from section. For what constitutes an excused absence, see "Late Work and Missed Exercises," below.

This Barn of a Room
This hall is too large for a class this size, so we will be moving people as far forward in the room as is practical and comfortable. Your TAs will be seated just behind the last "available" rows; you must choose a seat closer to the front than they are sitting.

In-class Behavior, including Wireless Communication
Be respectful of one another and the teaching staff, and refrain from distracting activities. Do not read the paper, gossip, or catch up your electronic correspondence. Phones and other devices must be turned off or completely silent--not on vibrate--during lectures and sections. No texting or other electronic communication is allowed. If the message you are waiting for is so important that it can't stay unread or unanswered for another hour, don't come to class. I have observed lectures from the back of enough lecture halls to know that most laptop users spend a considerable amount of time on Facebook, sports sites, and other activities other than note-taking; the TAs seated in the back of the classroom will take note of this as well. This is not to discourage you from using a laptop for note-taking, but to let you know that you will be no more invisible to us during your online extracurricular activity than you would be if you held up a newspaper or did a sudoku on top of your notebook.

Academic Responsibility
All written work that you turn in should be your own, and you are responsible for knowing what constitutes plagiarism; claiming ignorance will not help you after the fact. If you repeat someone else’s words, you must use quotation marks and must cite the relevant author, work, and page numbers (either in parentheses or in a footnote). Likewise, if you closely paraphrase another writer or rely on his or her ideas, you must acknowledge your debt with an appropriate citation. Appropriation of another author's work without citation—whether or not you use direct quotations—always constitutes plagiarism. Some clear guidelines are available on the Writing Center's website at http://writing.wisc.edu/Handbook/QPA_plagiarism.html. Cheating in any form is completely unacceptable, and there will be no second chances.

Special Needs and Requests
We will make every effort to accommodate students' needs. Students requiring accommodation must work through the McBurney Center and must alert their T.A. well before the first time they require such accommodation; otherwise, in a class this size, we cannot guarantee that we can make arrangements.

Late Work and Missed Exercises
Absences or missed deadlines are only considered "excused" if the student provides a note from a medical professional or dean. In the absence of such a note, your work will lose points every day that passes, and you will not be able to retake missed quizzes.

Readings
Books [#] are available at Rainbow Bookstore Cooperative, 46 W. Gilman St. Readings marked [•] are part of a course packet available at the Humanities Copy Center.

Paul E. Johnson, Sam Patch, the Famous Jumper (New York: Hill & Wang, 2003).

- 12/14 Mon  Making History

Final Exam, 12:05, Dec. 19 [end of scheduled exam block]
This exam will cover material from the entire course and will ask you to synthesize what you have learned. As on the midterm, you will be responsible for all items appearing on lecture outlines and all "key study terms" for readings. 20% of final grade.
General Notes about Writing History

I: Clarity of Argument

Thesis statements: Each paper must begin with an unmistakably clear statement of your argument. Your first paragraph should inform your readers what the paper is going to tell them, and in what general order. As you revise, ask yourself how your opening lines might be improved in order to give the reader a better idea of what to expect.

Advancing the argument: The first sentence of each paragraph in the main body of your paper should make a claim that helps support your overall argument; the rest of the paragraph should offer evidence supporting that particular claim. Each sentence should advance your argument; if you can't explain how it accomplishes that, it can probably be cut. As you move through the paper, make sure the major transitions from section to section are obvious.

Revision: The essence of writing is revising, and very few writers write effective first drafts. Leave yourself plenty of time for this process. If you're in the middle of writing your final paragraph when you finally figure out what you're arguing, then it's time to revise again. Incorporate that new understanding into your first paragraph and re-write the paper with that stronger version of your argument as your new starting place.

II: Clarity of Presentation

Style: Avoid the passive voice. Write strong, clear sentences that make your meaning plain.

Accuracy: Your dates, names, quotations, page references, and citations must be absolutely perfect. In this area of history writing, there's no room for negotiation. You get it right or you don't; if you don't, you quickly lose all credibility as an historian.

Citations: In a short paper based on one or two sources, list the source(s) at the top of the first page and identify quotations with a parenthetical page reference in the text; in a longer paper or one with more than a few sources, use footnotes or endnotes. In either case, be consistent, complete, and above all accurate. Where you are quoting or paraphrasing another writer, you must indicate your debt, down to the relevant page number(s). If you are paraphrasing other writers or using their arguments, you should indicate that. Err on the side of too much acknowledgment rather than too little.

Proofreading for spelling and grammar: Your papers should contain no spelling errors, sentence fragments, or run-ons. The spell-checking feature in your word processing program is not sufficient and may hurt you unless you also check the paper by hand.

Whose paper is this? Put your full name at the top of each page, number the pages, and staple them together. If you are turning in an assignment electronically, make sure you have complied with the requirements (i.e. format, method of submission) as listed on the syllabus.

A title, please: Show pride in your work by giving it a real title, one that captures its theme or argument and (if possible) has some poetry to it as well. "Twelve Years a Slave" is a pretty good title; "Civil War America" is not.
