COURSE DESCRIPTION:

We will explore in this course the process of becoming an American. Understanding this process is important because being an American works to secure certain rights as well as access to society’s resources such as schools, financial aid, social security, bank loans, and medical benefits. Our ideas about who counts as an American also influences the kinds of stories we tell, the movies we make, and the histories we write. For many, being an American creates and provides a sense of legitimacy and belonging within a nation-state. It is a means of identifying oneself along with the set of values governing national belonging.

This course develops how the government’s management of the immigration and naturalization of Asian Americans, more than any other group, established the legal terms on how one becomes an American. It also examines how the settlement patterns of Asian Americans, how they are situated in society, shed light into the differential meanings of citizenship and national belonging. This course further explores the ways in which the struggle over what gets taught at the universities and in particular, the battle waged to include Asian American Studies within the academy worked to create a sense of legitimacy for Asian Americans. Lastly, this course examines popular movies and music as important mediums where ideas about the place of Asian Americans in society get played out and contested.

While this course concentrates on the activities and cases involving Asian Americans, it uses these happenings as a window into the complicated and uneven processes of becoming an American, issues that impact and influence all groups in the U.S. and beyond. The emphasis on Asian Americans unearths concerns such as: Do our political beliefs impact our sense of legitimacy in the U.S.? How does nationality, race, class, gender, and sexuality mediate a group’s sense of belonging in the U.S.? What impact does the political relationship between the U.S. and other countries have on groups in the U.S. associated with these countries? The study of Asian Americans aims to deepen, enrich, and enliven our discussions on these important issues.

COURSE POLICIES:

Ground Rules: This course is open to a variety of ways of interpreting history and culture and students are encouraged to share their questions and ideas in lecture and discussion sections. Since there will be differences and disagreements, students are expected to show respect to the comments and positions of fellow students, of the graduate instructors, as well as of the professor. We need to all work together to create an environment that fosters critical thinking and respect for different ways of thinking.

Each student is warmly encouraged to meet with the professor and the graduate instructors during office hours and by appointment.

Attendance: Regular and prompt attendance, active participation, and mature attentiveness during lecture meetings are mandatory. The professor will not distribute lecture notes via e-mail for students who miss lecture and lecture notes will not be posted on the course webpage.

Readings: Students are expected to complete each week’s required readings before Monday’s lecture. You need to bring your notes and a copy of the assigned readings for the week to each discussion section.
Discussion Sections: You will NOT pass this course even if you do all the written work and exams but do not attend weekly discussion sections. Your discussion leader has full authority to assign homework, administer quizzes, and require drafts of papers. She will provide you with additional guidelines and policies for the discussion section.

Quizzes, Writing Assignments, and Examinations: There will be unannounced quizzes on course materials in lecture. Quizzes will always be administered during the first ten to fifteen minutes of class. There will be no make-up quizzes given, without exception. Assignments are always due during the first ten minutes of lecture. Any assignment received after the first ten minutes of lecture on the due date is considered late and will not be evaluated or credited. No late work will be accepted. E-mailed submissions of papers are not permitted and will not be credited or graded, without exception. Exam 1 and Final Exam 2 will be given according to the schedule indicated in the course syllabus and according to university schedule. No incompletes will be granted for the course except in cases of personal emergencies subject to the discretion of the professor and the valid documentation of the emergency. Students are responsible for retaining a copy of all exams, quizzes, and assignments.

Honesty: Please read the university policy on plagiarism. All information borrowed from print sources and/or the internet must be clearly identified and properly credited. Any instance of plagiarism or cheating on exams, quizzes, and written assignments will result in an “F” grade for the assignment and the course.

Abilities: Any student who feels that he or she may need special accommodation due to a disability should contact the professor. Please also contact the McBurney Disability Resource Center (http://www.mcburney.wisc.edu/) at 608-263-2741 (phone); 263-6393 (TTY); 263-2998 (FAX); FrontDesk@mcw.wisc.edu to ensure that accommodations are implemented in a timely fashion.
