This course traces the history of the Jews since the 17th century. This is the history of a minority group whose life in the diaspora, both prior to the establishment of the State of Israel and now outside of it, unfolded/unfolds in relationship to a majority society.

Many conventional accounts of Jews in the modern period employ the category of "assimilation" and lament the supposed decline of Jewish identification and collective life. In contrast, this course emphasizes the multiple transformations of Jewish self-understanding evidenced in the constant creation and re-creation of identity. It does so by focusing on individuals. We study the major developments in Jewish history through the experience of individuals, asking how history shaped individual identity yet also enabled individuals to shape their identity. The readings for the course accordingly emphasize individuals. They include biography, autobiography, diaries, an autobiographical novel and an historical novel as well as numerous documents from the time.

The course attempts to account for the geographical sweep of Jewish history. It is divided into four units: Europe (two units); Middle East, North Africa & Israel (one unit); America (one unit).

The course meets twice weekly. The course will be conducted as a discussion. It is essential that you have prepared the assigned readings in advance and are ready to discuss them in class. It is also essential that you bring the appropriate readings to class so you can refer to them. ATTENDANCE IS REQUIRED.

This course intends to teach writing skills and is an officially designated "writing intensive course." There are four 2-3 page papers (for the first and third units of the course), one 4-5 page paper (for the second unit of the course) and a final 6-8 page paper. For the first paper you will meet with me: bring a thesis statement to the meeting so that we can discuss it.

We have the good fortune to have a Writing Fellow(s) assigned to the course. Writing Fellows are skilled undergraduate writers who have been specially selected and carefully trained to help you improve your writing. You will meet with the Writing Fellow in regard to your second and third papers. You will submit a draft of your paper in advance to the Writing Fellow and then meet with him/her to discuss it. You will then revise and submit the paper.

Students will have the opportunity to re-write all papers. Rewrites are due one week after the paper has been returned. The rewrite must be accompanied by the original paper and the instructor's comments. You must also indicate in a cover note what changes you have made and also clearly mark the changes you have made on the paper itself (highlighting is easiest to follow).
