Course Description

Discussions of Latin America usually fall back upon facile generalizations that emphasize recent changes to explain "current events." The region's history, though, can be viewed as a process: a process begun long before Columbus "discovered" America. So, in order to understand Latin America, students must examine the unfolding of its history. In doing so, they will find human struggles between social classes, and against faceless external forces. Ultimately, students will discover a unique region, made up of very different countries, formed by common struggles.

This course will detail, in a variety of ways, the creation of modern Latin America (i.e., from political independence from Europe in the early 1800s to the present). The region’s history will be explored through lectures, readings, essay writing, and group discussions. Some lectures will analyze broad developments; others will detail specific cases of importance or interest. In some class sessions we will move away from the standard format, and examine Latin American History through the testimony of peasants, industrial workers, revolutionaries, intellectuals, foreign travelers, and others. At all times, the instructor will seek to integrate analyses of class, race, and gender in the lectures.

Coming to grips with Latin America's history is a difficult, but worthwhile undertaking. If you are willing to open your mind to new ideas and ways of thinking, and if you are willing to work your way through challenging readings and writing assignments, you will be able to understand Latin America.

Requirements

1) Two short (ca. five pages) papers, inspired by the assigned readings. Your task is to use one of the readings as a starting point for a thought paper in which you explore an issue or issues suggested to you in the combination of that reading and related discussions/lectures.

2) Exams: (a) An in-class midterm, consisting of one essay question selected from a list of three review questions handed out ahead of time; and (b) A final exam, consisting of one comprehensive essay question, one essay on the second half of the course, and an I.D. section also based on the second half of the course.

3) Honors/Extra Credit Option: A semester project, consisting of an 8 to 10-page life history. You detail the experiences of a specific individual, in a specific country over a period of forty years. The criteria for defining the individual will be established in consultation with the T.A. and/or the professor. In addition to the life history itself, you will also present a 1-page proposal for the project, due the fifth week of class. The details of the project, how to carry it out, and what it entails, can be discussed with the T.A. or professor periodically throughout the semester. As an extra credit or honors option, the project is undertaken in lieu of one of the short papers.

4) Grading: Short papers; 30% (15% each); midterm: 20%; final exam: 20%; discussion: 20%; honors/extra credit option: to be discussed with professor and T.A.
