HISTORY 309

THE CRUSADES: CHRISTIANITY AND ISLAM

FALL 2011

Lectures: Tuesday and Thursday, 9.30-10.45, 1641 Humanities
Professor David Morgan, 4113 Humanities, Phone: 263-1826. domorgan@wisc.edu
Teaching Assistant: Nick Abbott. nabbott@wisc.edu

SCOPE OF THE COURSE

History 309 will look at the phenomenon of the Crusade, as well as the history of the individual Crusades. It will place more emphasis on the "other" side - the Islamic side - than has traditionally been the case in Crusading studies, which have tended to be overwhelmingly Western-oriented. It will also give some attention to recent developments in the historiography of the Crusades.

REQUIREMENTS

Students will be expected to write a paper of about 10 pages, to be submitted by 6 December, and two book reviews of 2-3 pages, to be submitted by 27 September and 1 November. The books chosen for review should be directly relevant to the course. Students are at liberty to choose their own topics for the papers (subject to approval by me or by the TA); but suggestions for suitable topics can be offered, and we can recommend appropriate reading. There will be a mid-term quiz, taken in class, and an end of term quiz before the penultimate week of the semester. Attendance at both lectures and sections counts towards the final grade.

REFERENCE

B. Hamilton, The Crusades (1998) is an excellent introduction in 100 very small pages
P.M. Holt, The Age of the Crusades. The Near East from the Eleventh Century to 1517 (1986) looks at the period from the standpoint of a historian of the Middle East
N. Housley, Contesting the Crusades (2006) is useful on historiographical controversies
N. Housley, The Later Crusades. From Lyons to Alcazar 1274-1580 (1992) is standard for its period
T. Jones & A. Ereira, Crusades (1995) is the book of a farcical BBC TV series
P. Lock, The Routledge Companion to the Crusades (2006) is a useful handbook
H.E. Mayer, The Crusades, 2nd ed. (1988) is a good survey by a historian not of the Riley-Smith school.
J. Phillips, The Crusades 1095-1197 (2002) is very good on the first century of Crusading
T. Asbridge, The Crusades (2010) effectively stops at 1291, is long, but is very accessible.
J. Richard, The Crusades, c. 1071-1291 (1999) is a splendid example of the French historiographical tradition
S. Runciman, A History of the Crusades, 3 vols (1951-4) is the classic older history
R. Grousset, Histoire des Croisades, 3 vols (1934-6) is the French equivalent of Runciman
C. Tyerman, God’s War. A New History of the Crusades (2006) is the most impressive – and massive - single-author history since Runciman’s.

T.F. Madden (ed.), Crusades. The Illustrated History (2004) is by several well-known scholars, with excellent colour pictures.

P. Edbury & J. Phillips, and M. Bull & N. Housley (eds), The Experience of Crusading, 2 vols (2003) is a valuable collection of articles in honour of Jonathan Riley-Smith, the most influential contemporary historian of the Crusades.

There are many other useful collections of studies, such as:
