COURSE DESCRIPTION

What we usually call "The Vietnam War" (1965-1975) was one of the central events in modern U.S. history. It generated a deep and painful division of public opinion in which the pro-war forces were called murderers and their opponents traitors. It brought violent demonstrations and counter-demonstrations, massive draft-dodging, and costs of some $200 billion. It required the services of some three million Americans, of whom about 58,000 died, it wrecked the careers of the two presidents who carried it out, and it brought back its veterans to a cruelly indifferent homeland. Today it provides the basic frame of reference for the fierce dispute on US foreign policy, particularly in Central America. There is good reason to study the war as a topic in US history.

But that is not the whole story. The fighting in 1965-75 took place not in the US but in Vietnam (as well as in neighboring Cambodia and Laos). Somewhat over a million Vietnamese were killed in those ten years, about 20 for each American who died. Perhaps six million were driven from their home villages in the fighting. It was the most intensive war in human history: year by year in a country about 2½ times the size of Wisconsin about a million tons of bombs were dropped, a million acres were defoliated, and 200,000 acres of crops were destroyed.

One must also keep in mind that for the Vietnamese and their neighbors 1965-1975 was only one phase in a much longer war. For them the war began in 1940, and with varying levels of violence, has continued up to the present moment. Over that nearly half century long war about one and three quarters million Vietnamese, roughly 5% of the population, were killed, and about three and a half million wounded. The same proportion of total US population in the 1965-75 period would have meant ten million Americans dead and twenty million wounded. Few Vietnamese alive today do not have at least one dead or wounded relative to remember. No American can pay attention only to what we are doing over there, or concentrate on only ten years of so protracted and terrible a war -- in which, in any case, the US was actively involved during the twenty years before 1963.

How and when did the United States get involved in these wars, and why did it stay in so long? Why and how did it get out? Should the US have been there at any time over the years; was it morally right or wrong? Was it possible for the US to have won or not? What did that war do to or for American society? How and why did the Vietnam Wars get started in 1940? What has kept them going up to the present? What drew so many outside powers -- Chinese, French, Americans, and Russians -- into the story? How did the fighting spread, slowly at first, then faster, to neighboring Laos and Cambodia? From where did the Vietnamese communists and others who fought with them get the strength to wear down and eventually expel the French and then the Americans? Were these wars of independence, or civil wars, or "proxy wars" in which local forces served the interests of competing great powers? These are the questions this course attempts to answer.

Ethnic/linguistic groups of Indochina

For reference use the map (two sheets) provided in the Reserve Book Room, DS 509.5 E837/1 and DS 509.5 E8372.

1. The three large lowland groups (use solid colors, or heavy hatching)

   a. Vietnamese (use two colors or different hatchings):
      i. Around 1000 AD (see map of "South-East Asia about 1150" on the front endpapers of Atlas of South-East Asia. Reserve G 2360 A7.
      ii. Additional area occupied by Vietnamese by the 20th century.
   b. Cambodians (Khmers) -- in Cambodia and bits of Vietnam and Laos (omit Cambodians in Thailand).
   c. Lowland Buddhist Lao of Laos. Draw an arbitrary 1/4 inch thick line in color or hatching from Luang Prabang to Khone (falls) on the left bank (going downstream) of the Mekong River.

2. Hill ethnic groups (occupying all the rest of Indochina). Mark with one color or light hatching.

NOTE: Be sure to use only your two outline maps provided in your Kinko's course packet.
