American Labor History, 1900-Present

This course surveys the history of working people in the United States in the 20th and 21st century, focusing on the historical meanings of work and working-class culture. We will look at the ways in which a variety of scholars and “organic intellectuals” have drawn upon the methods and practices of labor history, social history, economic history, and cultural studies to examine the lives of working women and men. Throughout the course, we will be examining relations of power by looking closely at ideas about race, class, ethnicity, gender, and sexuality. We will be especially concerned with how these ideas have shaped working-class lives, informed class relations, and organized communities of solidarity. Some of the questions we will address are: What is unique about US labor history and what is part of a shared international history of workers? How have processes of cultural fusion and cultural fragmentation operated to unite and divide workers? In what ways does an interrogation of the politics of space (place, location, landscape, architecture, environment, home, neighborhood, city, region, and territory) help us to understand working-class cultures? Questions about American Exceptionalism and the American Dream; community and solidarity; class formation and social identity; and the relationship between working-class strategies of resistance and the everyday lives of working people will be the focus of our course readings, films, discussions, and research projects during the semester.

Course Requirements

1. General

Class Participation. The success of the course depends upon your contribution to the creation of a community of scholars dedicated to cooperative learning. Thus, class participation includes: attending all class meetings, completing all reading and writing assignments in preparation for class discussions, viewing all films, and engaging in lively and respectful dialogue with one another.

Laptops and Notetaking. The use of laptop computers or other screen-based devices is not permitted during lecture (including when films are screened). Please take notes by hand.

2. Writing and Research

Film Critique. You will write one 3-page (approximately 900 words) essay discussing how one of the following pairs of films represents labor history. Select one due date and write an essay on a pair of films listed for that date (must be a designated pair, don’t mix and match films on your own):

- Oct. 18: Gandy Dancers & Dollar a Day, Ten Cents a Dance
- Oct. 25: Triangle & Uprising of ’34
- Nov. 15: Free a Man to Fight & Uprising of ’34
- Nov. 29: Dollar a Day, Ten Cents a Dance & Chavez Ravine
- Dec. 6: Sir! No Sir! & Free a Man to Fight OR Chavez Ravine & San Francisco State
- Dec. 13: Made in L.A. & Triangle OR Made in L.A. & Uprising of ’34

Extra Credit: You may write 3-page essays on additional groups of films to earn extra credit toward your final grade in the course. These must be submitted by the due dates listed.
2. Writing and Research (cont.)

Working-Class History Project. You will complete a two-part Research and Writing Project on one of the following three themes addressed in the three assigned monographs:

1. Class vs. racial solidarity
   - David Roediger, The Wages of Whiteness

2. Struggle for control over the workplace
   - David Montgomery, Workers’ Control

3. Gender equality in the workplace
   - Annelise Orleck, Common Sense & a Little Fire

Part One. A three-page proposal (approximately 900 words) in which you: a) identify the argument the author of the monograph makes about the theme you have selected; b) offer two specific examples of the theme in the monograph; c) identify two primary and two secondary sources the author of the monograph used to support his/her argument; d) pose a question based on the theme you have selected that you will address in your research paper; e) identify particular course materials (readings, films, music, and lectures) that will help you address your main research question; and f) identify primary sources you plan to use and offer a description of their location and accessibility.

Part One Due Thursday, November 1

Part Two. A six-eight page essay (approximately 1,800-2,400 words) expanding on the argument you posed in your three-page proposal. Your essay must a) identify a question important to history about your selected theme; b) suggest an answer to your question (this is your major argument); c) provide evidence and examples that support your answer/argument, including both primary and secondary sources; and d) integrate your answer/argument and evidence into a coherent, persuasive conclusion. One of your primary sources must focus on your own community, however you define it. A detailed research and writing guide will be distributed in class.

Part Two Due Tuesday, December 11

3. Examinations

Midterm Examination. There will be an in-class midterm examination Tuesday, Oct. 16, consisting of one long essay question and four short identification questions.

Final Examination. The final examination will cover material since the midterm. This will be an in-class examination on Tuesday, Dec. 18, 5:05-7:05, consisting of one long essay question, one short essay question, and four short identification questions.

Grade Distribution:

- Class Participation 20%
- Film Critique 10%
- Midterm Examination 20%
- Research Project 25%
- Final Examination 25%
