History of Punishment

Description:
Among the most evocative aspects of human history is the way we have fined, shamed, exiled, imprisoned, pained, maimed, dismembered or killed those deemed to be in violation of the laws of gods and men. This course examines punishment across a vast range of historical traditions, examining how wrongdoing and punishment have been figured in law, literature, art and philosophy. Through the semester we will examine ancient, medieval and modern traditions.

Required Texts:
Course Reader (Available at Bob’s Copyshop, 616 University Ave.)
(Note: Where possible, I have noted texts that are available online. The specified links are only a recommendation. Many of these texts are widely available online at many sites. However, published texts are preferable, mainly because, unlike most online versions, they contain line numbers that will make certain portions of some lecture easier to follow.)

Sophocles, Oedipus at Colonus (Robert Fagles and Bernard Knox (Penguin Classics, 2000)

(texts also available online: http://classics.mit.edu/Sophocles/)

The Bible (Obtain your own copy. We will be reading portions of the book of Genesis.)

Beowulf (trans. Burton Raffel and Roberta Frank, Signet Classics, 2008) (an electronic version of the text is available online: http://www.heorot.dk/)

Michel Foucault, Discipline and Punish (trans. Alan Sheridan, Vintage, 1997) (Available at the UW Bookstore, as well as other booksellers.)

Examinations:
Over the course of the semester there will be three examinations, two mid-term examinations and a final. The midterm examinations will account for 25% each of your final grade, the final will account for 40%. Attendance and participation will account for 10% of your final grade. The exams will be composed of short, written, take-home assignments and will be graded on content and style.
