Except Vietnam, the countries in the mainland Southeast Asia (Burma, Cambodia, Laos, Thailand) are distinctive not only to the region but also to the world since, including Sri Lanka, they are the homeland of Theravada Buddhism for more than a thousand years. Over 120 millions people today have practiced and lived under the influence of Theravada Buddhism. With the Westernization and attempted secularization in those countries taken place less than 150 years ago, the influence of religious tradition is very strong. It is not overstated that it is impossible to understand those countries and people without recognizing the role of Theravada Buddhism.

It is not the aim of this course, however, to study the Theravada’s tenets or philosophy in depth. As a history course, the theme will be the role of religion in the polities and cultures of those countries in history: the ideas and influence of Theravada Buddhism in shaping political and social institutions, the role of the monastic order in relation to the state and peasant, and the effects of and on the religion as the countries have gone through colonialism and modernization since the mid-nineteenth century. The focus on Thailand and Burma is not arbitrary, since they are major force of the region’s history and religious development, and they provide us with adequate examples to understand the entire region.

As an introduction to the culture with which students may not be familiar, the course will explore major topics instead of a chronology. No previous knowledge is required; nor is the ability to memorize all the dates and unfamiliar terms and names. What is required is attention and patience, plus imagination, to learn about the unfamiliar culture.

Class: Two 75-min. lectures weekly. Questions are welcome any time in and/or at the end of the class.

Office Hours: Rm. 5211 Humanities ph. 263-8931
Tuesday 3:00-4:00, Wednesday 11:00-12:00, and by appointment

Grading:
1. One mid-term take-home exam. The question will be given probably in Week 6 and due a week later. (20%)
2. For four credit students: One research paper about 10-12 pages, plus notes and references at the end. Due April 22. (40%)
   For three credit students: a short essay (4 pages) on a narrow topic, OR given materials, OR a book review. The instruction will be given in Week 9 and due April 22. (40%) [All written works must be typed in double space.]
3. Final exam (see the Time-table) 40%

What is expected from students is NOT the ability to excerpt, or paraphrase the lecture or reading materials, but one’s understanding of the subjects in her/his own words; his/her ability to communicate in writing, the basic research skills such as library search for relevant materials, and the ability to explain a question either by analysis or description. Originality, creativity and imagination will be bonus.
Required Textbooks:
The Course package for History 438—Spring 1994 (available at the Copy Center of Humanities Building, Rm.1650 Humanities)

Recommended books:
Ishii, Yoneo. *Sangha, State and Society: Thai Buddhism in History
Tambiah, S.J. *World Conqueror and World Renouncer
Sarkisyanz, E. Buddhist Backgrounds of the Burmese Revolution. (A classic book, very good for our class. Unfortunately it is old and out of print. There are many copies in the libraries, and in the reserves.)

All textbooks and the recommended ones, including the course package, are also available in the Reserves Collection (in the College Library). This course have previously offered as History 203 and 459 in 1992 and 1993 respectively. The course packages of both are also in the Reserves, although the materials are not entirely the same.

Note on the Readings:
The required readings in each week are in either the required textbooks or in the coursepack. The number at the end of each item is page numbers. The supplemental readings are recommended for anyone interested in particular topics.
