4 CREDITS or 3 CREDITS?

If you take the course for 4 credits you will write a 10-15 page term paper due December 7 - NO EXCEPTIONS. Any paper received after the due date will be significantly penalized in grade. The topic of the paper must be approved by the instructor. If you elect this option your topic must be set by October 5. On that day you will hand in a typed sheet with your paper topic and a one paragraph discussion of what you hope to do with it. Graduate students will submit a 15-20 page term paper of expected higher quality. On November 23 a bibliography for your paper including books and journal articles is due. Individual meetings with the instructor will be arranged to discuss the paper in more detail for those students who elect this option.

This course deals with the history of West Africa from the first millennium to the period of political independence in the 1960s. Some of the major topics covered in the course are: an introduction to West African peoples, social systems, and geography; archaeology and its findings; the influence of Islam; trans-Saharan and Atlantic trading systems; West African empires and the effects of these empires on the peoples outside of those polities; the West European impact on Africa prior to political partition; the Atlantic slave trade and its abolition; West African Islamic jihads; political partition by European powers; the colonial period; African organization toward independence; problems facing West Africa today. It is a course that emphasizes writing rather than exam-taking.

Paper assignments: The two paper assignments and the final exam are to be typed, double-spaced, proof-read, with 1" margins. Each page is approximately 225 words. You must fit your paper within the page/word length specified and must write at least as much as indicated by these specifications. No exceptions. Those papers which are too long or too short will have points deducted automatically. These are not arbitrary page lengths, but fit the questions asked at the level of this class. You are to write the papers using class materials—lectures, novels, readings. No outside research is required for either of the papers or the exam. Think about the material and organize your essays. Use direct quotes, if any, sparingly.

Attendance: Attendance is required at all lectures and will be taken each day. Poor attendance will be reflected in your final grade.

Readings: Readings below are an integral part of the course. Readings not found in the required texts listed above are on reserve in the College Library Reserve reading room.
