History 444: History of East Africa
Spring 2016

MW 9:55-10:45 in 360 Science Hall

Introduction
History 444 is an introductory survey of East African history. The course will provide students with an historical foundation for thinking about contemporary East Africa. We will cover a range of topics and time periods, from the distant past to issues debated by East African communities today. The format of the course will be a combination of lectures and class discussions. We will draw upon a variety of materials, including academic texts, journals and films. The course will be divided into several units. The first part of the course will examine the development of trade, Islam, and urbanism on the Swahili coast. The second part will focus on the origins of European colonialism, Africans’ experiences during the colonial period, and the rise of nationalism and decolonization in East Africa. The third part of the course will investigate post-independence politics in East Africa and more recent events like the China’s involvement in the region and political violence in Rwanda. We will conclude by examining popular culture in contemporary East Africa.

Lectures
I expect faithful attendance at lectures. We meet on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9:55-10:45am in 360 Science Hall. Please note that to facilitate a comfortable learning environment for all, recording devices of any sort will be permitted only with the instructor’s consent. Students wishing to use laptop computers to take notes may do so.

Required Readings:
All students are required to buy the following books:

Reading assignments are listed in the weekly schedule. You are expected to do all of the reading. You cannot properly participate in discussion sections and do well on exams unless you have read everything that has been assigned. Lectures and readings are intended to be complementary.

Graded Work
There will be three take-home assignments:

1) The first take-home assignment will cover weeks 1-6. I will provide detailed instructions in class on February 26. The assignment will be due in class on Monday, March 11.
2) The second take-home assignment will cover weeks 7-11. I will provide detailed instructions on April 1. The assignment will be due in class on Monday, April 11.
3) The third take-home assignment will ask you to reflect on materials presented throughout the course, with extra weight given to subjects covered in weeks 12-16. I will provide detailed instructions on May 4. The assignment will be due in class on May 13.

Grades
Grades for the course will be weighted as follows:
- First Take-home assignment 20%
- Second Take-home assignment 20%
- Third Take-home assignment 30%
- Participation grade 30%

Participation Grade
Points will be based on your attendance of lecture and your contributions to class discussions each week. It will be assumed that you have done the readings, thought about the concepts and issues, and will come to class prepared to share your opinions and questions. Class discussion is your opportunity to demonstrate that you have done the readings and thought critically about their content. Each student will be required to lead discussion for one course topic to be assigned the first week of class. Your responsibilities include introducing the topic and providing questions for class discussion. There will be one “excused” absence which will not deduct points, but as additional days of lecture and class discussion are missed, three (3) points are deducted from your participation grade.

Other Resources for the Course
In addition to the Writing Center, located at the Helen C. White Hall, Room 6171, I encourage you to make use of the History Lab. This is a resource center for undergraduate students studying, researching, and writing about the past. They will help you with choosing a topic, conducting research, composing a thesis, outlining your argument, revising your drafts. The Lab is staffed by talented and experienced graduate students from the Department of History. The Lab is equipped also to support challenges faced by English-language learners. The History Lab is located in 4255 Humanities.

Academic Honesty
By enrolling in the university, students are automatically agreeing to abide by policies, including those on academic misconduct. Plagiarism and cheating contradict these values, and so are very serious academic offenses. Penalties can include a failing grade in an assignment or in the course. Students are expected to familiarize themselves with and follow citation practices. If you are unsure please come and talk to me.
