History of the American West to 1850

“The American West is a product of conquest and of the mixing of diverse groups of peoples.”—Richard White, Your Misfortune and None of My Own

"This country will kill you in a heartbeat and still people love it."—Cormac McCarthy, No Country for Old Men

This is not your grandfather’s American West. There will be no Wild Bill Hickok, Sitting Bull and Custer, or the transcontinental railroad. Rest assured, there will be gold, equestrian Plains Indians, buffalo, and explorers. Such lists do not so easily define the “West,” however. This course presumes a liberal definition of the West, one that existed in many places over time and one that is as much a human and historical creation as it is a geographical designation. The West we visit in this class may sometimes be a familiar or strange place, but whatever West we find ourselves in, common themes emerge. The historian Richard White depicts an American West as a place of collaboration and co-existence, integration and rejection, mediation and creative misunderstandings while Cormac McCarthy reminds us that violence has also always been a part of this history, too. Our history focuses on the ways people of European, Indian, African and Asian descent claimed and contested place and belonging in shared landscapes. Examining such meetings and relationships among diverse and distinct cultures uncover the making of the American West as a gradual, human creation and not a place already in existence or one that suddenly emerged. This course will challenge students to think about such questions as “Where is the West?” and “When did the West Begin?” Our West begins in the pre-“discovery” Americas occupied by Indigenous peoples, continues with a constellation of encounters between Native and non-Native cultures, the eventual creation of two new nations, Mexico and the United States, and concludes with the U.S. conquest in the nineteenth century.

Although the course is intended to be challenging, it is also meant to be fun: any student willing to attend lectures, participate in discussion section, do the readings, and work hard should be able to enjoy and do well in History 461.
COURSE REQUIREMENTS & FORMAT

Ethnic Studies Requirement: This course fulfills UW-Madison’s Ethnic Studies Requirement, the purpose of which is to send UW graduates into the world with a deeper understanding of the experiences of persistently marginalized groups in the U.S.; as well as the means by which such people have negotiated and resisted their marginalization. Our focus is historical rather than contemporary, but as historians, we believe that understanding past processes of marginalization, negotiation, and resistance is a crucial part of coming to terms with present conditions and working together to create a more just and equitable future. We look forward to hearing your thoughts as you learn more about how such issues have played out in western North America.

General: Faithful attendance; prompt completion of weekly readings, respectful participation in section; and completion of assignments when they are due.

Lecture: This is a large lecture course. It meets three days a week, MWF, for 50 minutes. There are 144 of you and one of me. This is an antiquated model for teaching. I refuse to talk at you for 50 minutes, so expect some in-class participation (see Active Learning Exercises below). The course also features a number of documentary and feature films, and other media. Class begins promptly.

Section: Section is a crucial component of this course and it is imperative that you attend. A full 20% of your final grade will reflect your class participation, which is largely measured by your involvement in your assigned discussion section. Sections meet once a week to clarify the content and meaning of course texts and assignments. More than that, sections offer you, your classmates, and your TA an invaluable space for intelligent discussion based on your critical reading of texts and their bearing on course themes. Please read over the section syllabus designed by your teaching assistant carefully.

Active Learning Exercises: I will use activities during class to break up the monotony of lectures (even if they are awesome). These will also help me gauge your understanding of the course material. Little surprises around every corner, but nothing dangerous!

COURSE ASSIGNMENTS & EXAMS:

Film Journals: each of you should keep a journal about your intellectual reactions to the documentary and feature films that will be screened for this class (keeping such a journal will help jog your memory about the film content when exam time comes around.) You’ll have an opportunity to turn in a 250-500 word (or 1-2 page) journal entry that discusses the films and their relationship to readings and lectures. You don’t need to focus equally on all of the films screened, but your journal entry should discuss at least two of the films, and it should relate the films to other course materials. Here are the three options for your journal entry:

1) Write a 250-500 word (1-2 page) journal entry in which you discuss at least two episodes of the documentary film The West and their relationship to other course materials (readings, lectures, and/or other films)

2) Write a 250-500 (1-2 page) journal entry in which you discuss the feature films, Black Robe and Lone Star, and their relationship to other course materials (readings, lectures, and/or other films).
3) Write a 250-500 word (1-2 page) journal entry in which you discuss at least one of the episodes of the documentary film The West and on of the two feature films, Black Robe or Lone Star, and their relationship to other course materials (readings, lectures, and/or other films).

Your journal entry is due at the beginning of lecture on Mon. Dec. 5, UNLESS you’re writing about the film Lone Star. Some of the lectures and sections that follow may help you think about the film in new ways, so if you write about Lone Star, you can wait until the beginning of lecture on Wed. Dec. 14 to turn in your journal entry. The entry can be computer-generated or handwritten. It won’t be graded, but it will be marked use a +, √, - system, and this mark will be used to help determine your course participation grade. Please note, Black Robe is scheduled for Wednesday evening September 28 and Lone Star is scheduled for Monday evening November 21.

Short Paper: 500-600 words (ca 2 pages): You’ll receive guidelines for this paper early in the semester. This paper will give you a chance to consider in depth some of the primary source readings from The West in the History of the Nation, those reprinted in Chap. 1, “Cultures in Conflict: First Encounters,” chap. 2, “Colonization: Religion and Economy in Frontier Regions,” and chap. 3, “The Late Seventeenth Century: Rebellion on Two Frontiers.” You’ll choose at least two of the primary sources from any of these chapters and analyze the different points of view of the Spanish and/or French and/or English colonial projects and Native responses represented by each. Your paper will be due at the beginning of lecture on Mon. Sept. 26. This paper is designed to give you hands-on experience with the building blocks of history, that is, original primary source materials. You will have the chance to consider in depth two (2) primary resources related to course topics from The West reader and analyze the different points of view of their authors. Late papers will be accepted without penalty only if you negotiate an alternative due date with your teaching assistant at least 48 hours prior to the due date specified here. Otherwise, late papers will drop by one-half of a grade for each day that they are late.

Long Paper (Book Review) 1250-1300 words (ca. five pages): You’ll receive guidelines for this paper early in the semester. This paper will be written individually, but there will be teamwork involved in your initial research. For this paper, you’ll use as your starting point one of the three single-author books assigned to the class as a whole: Du Val, Native Ground; Ramos, Beyond the Alamo; or Johnson, Roaring Camp. We’d like to have roughly equal numbers of students writing on each of these books. So during the second week of class, we’ll ask you to designate your top two book choices, and then we’ll divide the class into three similarly sized groups, each one assigned to a different book. We’ll make every effort to assign you to your top choice book. The three mega-groups (each assigned one of the three books) will have time in class to organize themselves into smaller research teams (we suggest 2-4 students on each team). Each research team will then plan a research strategy for identifying primary source materials relevant to the book assigned. These primary sources should be found in libraries on campus. (Note that on Wed. Sept 14, we’ll have a librarian come to teach us how to find such materials.) The research teams from each mega-group will report on the primary sources they’ve found during the class period in which we’ll be discussing the book assigned to that mega-group (Native Ground, Wed. Oct. 5: Beyond the Alamo, Mon. Nov. 14: Roaring Camp, Mon. Dec 5). Meanwhile, each individual should be deciding on one or two of the primary sources identified to use in the preparation of his or her individual papers. The actual paper, then, will be both a review of the book and an exploration of how the author uses primary sources to make a historical argument. You’ll use the source(s) you’ve chosen to demonstrate in detail how the author makes use of primary materials. Your paper will be due at the beginning of lecture a week after the book you’ve read is discussed in class (Native Ground, Wed. Oct. 12; Beyond the Alamo, Mon. Nov. 21; Roaring Camp, Fri. Dec. 12). Papers must adhere to the word count, be computer-generated, and double-spaced. Late papers will be accepted without penalty only if you negotiate an alternative due date with your teaching assistant at least 48 hours prior to the due date specified here. Otherwise, later papers will drop by one-half of a grade for each day that they are late.

Exams: There will be two take-home exams, a Midterm and a Final. The Midterm questions will be handed out at the end of lecture on Fri. Oct. 14 and your answers must be handed in at the beginning of lecture on Fri. Oct. 21. There will be no lecture on Mon. Oct 17, but the instructor and teaching assistants will be available in the classroom to answer any questions you may have about the Midterm. The Final questions will be handed out in class on Fri. Dec. 9, and your answers are due during the regularly scheduled final exam period for this course, which is Mon. Dec. 19, from 12:25pm to 2:25pm. There will be no lecture on Wed. Dec. 14 but the professor and teaching assistants will be available in the classroom to answer any questions you may have about the Final. Midterm and Final exams must be computer-generated, double spaced, and they may not exceed the required word counts. While it is okay to exchange ideas through dialogue with your classmates, the work you turn in must be entirely your own. Writing is best done in solitude. This university takes academic dishonesty seriously. Evidence of collaboration, plagiarism, or other academic dishonesty will result in automatic failure. Late exams cannot be accepted.

COURSE POLICIES AND RESOURCES

Laptops and Notetaking: The use of laptop computers is permitted. Laptops may be used during lecture for notetaking purposes only. Because many of our classes rely on various forms of media that require a slightly darkened room, I do request that you reduce the brightness of your screens. Please make sure the volume on your device is muted. You may not use laptop computers or other screen-based devices during in-class or evening films. Remember, notetaking by hand is okay, too. In either case, we encourage you to share your notes with one another. In addition, lecture outlines and key terms will be available on the Learn@UW site for this class. New outlines usually are posted on Learn@UW the night before each lecture; you may wish to download and/or print these materials out and bring them with you to class. Laptops are generally not permitted in discussion sections where human interaction is a core goal. Check with your teaching assistant. If it comes to my attention that students are using laptops during lecture for purposes other than notetaking, I reserve the right to prohibit laptops for the remainder of the semester.

Course Materials on Learn@UW: Virtually all course materials will be posted on the Learn@UW site for this class. The exceptions to this rule include the midterm and final exams, which will be distributed in hard copy during regularly schedule lecture periods.

Accessibility: Everyone, regardless of disabilities or special needs, is welcome in this course. Please let me know if you need any accommodations in the instruction or evaluation procedures in order to facilitate your full participation. The McBurney Center provides useful assistance and documentation.
General Writing & Assignment Guidelines: With the exception of in-class Active Learning Exercises all work must follow these guidelines: Abide by the word count for each assignment and provide your essay’s exact word count at the bottom/end of your document. Papers must be computer-generated, double-spaced with standard 1-inch margins. Avoid “cartoonish typefaces.” Stick to Times New Roman, Cambria, or similar typefaces please, with font size set at 12. All assignments in this class—papers and exams—must be turned in at the beginning of lecture on the scheduled due date. Please include your section and TA information on your paper.

Writing Syllabus: In addition to the course syllabus and reading calendar (this document), you also received a “writing syllabus.” The “writing syllabus” provides a general rubric on good writing. Specifically, it outlines the qualities of an “A” essay, a “B” essay, a “C” essay, and so on. You’ll want to read over and refer back to this rubric when preparing and writing all papers and exams. The “writing syllabus” also offers some advice on thinking through writing.

Academic Misconduct: This class will strictly follow and enforce the university’s policies on academic misconduct. UWS 14.03 defines academic misconduct to include acts in which a student seeks to claim credit for the work or efforts of another without authorization or citation. Examples include but are not limited to:

a) Cutting and pasting text from the web without quotation marks or proper citation.
b) Paraphrasing from the web or written texts without crediting the source.
c) Using notes in an exam when such use is not allowed.
d) Using another person’s ideas, words, or research and presenting it as one’s own.

Complete information on academic misconduct is at www.wisc.edu/students/saja/misconduct/academic_misconduct.html.

Role of Teaching Assistants: Your teaching assistants are your primary contact person for any concerns regarding this course. I request that you always address your specific questions and concerns regarding your performance in the course (clarification of comments on written work, explanation of grade, etc.) in the course with your teaching assistant first. Below is a procedure for you to follow in regard to issues that may arise:

1) Your TA will have his or her own process & guidelines for handling help with assignments prior to their due date, extensions, grade disputes, and other issues related to course work in this class. Follow these first. Remember, your TA is your advocate, not your opponent.

2) If you are unsatisfied with the feedback and/or results of this meeting with your TA and wish to involve the instructor in the matter, please follow these steps:
   a. Step 1: To request a review of your grade on an assignment or exam by the instructor, I will require the original assignment with your TA’s comments and grade as well as a computer-generated document written by you outlining your concerns regarding your performance on the assignment and why you were unsatisfied with your first meeting. You may place these materials in hard copy in my humanities mailbox, fourth floor, #4113. (Please send an email notifying me of the same)
   b. Step 2: We will arrange a meeting that includes the three of us—you, your TA, and me—and we will discuss the matter together once I’ve reviewed the materials.
