It's a material, a material, a material, a material world.

--Madonna

The whole factual world of human affairs depends for its reality and its continued existence, first, upon the presence of others who have seen and heard and will remember, and, second, on the transformation of the intangible into the tangibility of things.

--Hannah Arendt

Course Description: This course introduces the new and highly interdisciplinary field of material culture studies. It is intended for advanced undergraduate and graduate students who are interested in any professional endeavor that requires training in material culture, including careers in museums, galleries, historical societies, historic preservation organizations, and academic institutions. During the semester, students will have varied opportunities to contemplate "things"--the material world to which people give meaning and which, in turn, influences their lives. The course takes the perspective that what we make, see, inhabit, eat, acquire, cherish, and discard--all are important agents of communication and part of broad social and cultural contexts.

During the semester, faculty from varied departments within the university, as well as guests from other institutions, will lecture and discuss with students material-culture dimensions of their own research. Other course work will include field trips and, for each student, an independent research project.

Development of this course was made possible by a Chancellor's Collaborative Teaching Award.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS & EVALUATION:

Class Participation (30%):

Students are expected to attend class regularly and to participate actively in discussions.

Class absences are discouraged and must be explained to one of the professors in advance.

Assigned Readings: All assigned readings are available in PDF format via each student’s UW portal (http://my.wisc.edu/portal, then go to the following links: Academic/Library/Reserve).

Students are expected to come to class fully prepared to discuss the readings on the days they are assigned.

Written Work:

1. Doing-Seeing-Writing Notebook (35%): Each student will keep a loose-leaf binder, in which to accumulate typewritten copies of responses to assigned readings and designated lectures. Through these writings, you will enhance your ability to analyze, succinctly summarize, and recall scholarly materials, as well as create a readily accessible compilation of course work.

   Synopsis of each assigned reading. On the day that each reading, or set of readings, is assigned (see the Class Schedule), bring to class a typewritten synopsis of each item. In no more than 200 words for each reading, state the author(s)’ major argument (interpretation) and evaluate it. What does the reading tell you about material culture? Does it relate to other assignments and/or the lectures, and, if so, in what way(s)?

   Synopsis of Designated Lectures: Members of the class will receive a list of relevant lectures (and related exhibits) scheduled on campus during the current semester. In lieu of the regularly scheduled class time, we will attend at least one such event, for which each student will write a synopsis of what s/he observed and learned; keep in mind the questions asked in the preceding paragraph.

2. Material Culture Case Studies (35%): In consultation with either Professor Boyd or Professor Lee, each student will develop an independent research project related to her/his area of academic specialization or interest.

   No later than Sept. 30 Consult with Professor Boyd or Lee about possible topics for your Case Study. For this you will need to schedule an appointment.

   Oct. 28 Annotated bibliography, or resource list, due. This should be an exploration of all sources you have identified and examined which promise to be useful your research project. For printed items, give the complete bibliographic citation for each. For objects or collections of objects, cite the location for each. If you conduct an interview, name the person, location, and date of the interview. In addition, state why each source appears useful for your topic.
Nov. 30- Graduate students will offer a 20-minute class presentation about their research projects (schedule to be arranged).

Dec. 7 Undergraduates will present their findings in a typewritten paper due (2,000-3,000 words).

Dec. 14 Paper due from graduate students (4,000-5,000 words).

Grading policies:
Each project is due on the date it is assigned. Turning work in late will carry a reduction in the assigned grade, so it is best to plan on timely completion. Any student having special needs should make that known to the professors in the first two weeks of classes.

A Word about Plagiarism: Copying another’s words or ideas without indicating the source is plagiarism, a serious offense. A first offense will result in a grade of F on the assignment. A second offense will result in a grade of F for the course grade.

Religious Holidays:
According to University policy, any student who expects to be absent from class work because of religious holidays must, within the first two weeks of class, notify the instructor(s) of the specific date(s) on which s/he will be absent. Students bear the responsibility for arranging make-up assignments. If necessary, reasonable limits on the total number of days claimed by any one student will be set.
