Course description:

This course explores the vibrancy and diversity of rule-based systems that may be called law. The common law—the dominant type of state legal system in Anglophone jurisdictions—is only one type of law. Normative orders also exist beyond the state or government. Like the law of the state, these other orders have rules, ways of enforcing them, and adjudicatory bodies that resolve disputes among their members. These systems appear in the clan, tribe, club, school, ethnic group, religious community, profession and corporation. The course covers a wide array of non-state actors and orders, drawing upon legal history and legal anthropology. We will examine everything from medieval English “forest law” to mafia law, the Tokyo tuna court to dispute resolution among orthodox Jewish diamond traders, and Australian aboriginal customary law to immigrant norms in Euro-American contexts. The course compares adversarial and conciliatory models of dispute resolution, along with fault- and no-fault-based systems. We will also explore institutional and justice-based arguments for and against the recognition of non-state law by the state, and strategies to move between legal orders through forum shopping. Interlegality, or relations between coexisting legal orders, is another key theme of the course. We will grapple with relationships of conflict and competition between legal systems, and with the possibility of other relations, including symbiosis, imitation, convergence, adaptation, avoidance, subordination and destruction. This course explores normative systems that most law-school courses ignore.

Course Grades & Requirements:

Your final grade will be based upon the following:

- Midterm exam (20%): in-class exam on T, March 8, 2011
- Short paper (20%): this short essay will present one particular case study on legal pluralism. You will choose to write about a normative system (ideally non-state) that has been covered in class or not. You must identify your topic via the sign-up screen on our Moodle course page, and must confirm that no classmate has claimed the same topic. (If there is a conflict, the student who signed up earliest will have the stronger claim to the topic.) If in doubt about potential overlap with another student, please discuss your topic idea with me. You must declare your topic (via our Moodle course page) by midnight on Th, March 24. You must submit your paper (via our Moodle course page) by midnight on Sunday, April 10, 2011.

- Final exam (40%): take-home exam. Questions will be distributed on the last day of class (Class 30): T, May 5, 2011. Your answers are due (via our Moodle course page) by 4.45pm on T, May 10, 2011. (Please note that our official exam time is T, May 10, 2011, 2.45pm-4.45pm, but that we will not be having a sit-down exam during that time.)

- Class participation (including attendance) (20%): you are expected to attend all classes and to contribute regularly to class discussions.

Format of Written Work:

Your short paper and final exam must be typed in 12-point font with 1-inch margins. Both must be double-spaced and submitted via our Moodle course page.

Course Materials:

All readings for the course are included in the course reader, available at the Copy Center (not the Bookmart) on the 2nd floor of the UW Law School (on Bascom Mall).

Technology:

- Laptop use in class: Because I appreciate the value of having typed course notes, I permit students to use laptops in class. However, I consider in-class internet use to be unacceptable. Being on the internet during class is distracting to your classmates and disrespectful to me. If it appears to me that you are online during class, I will factor this into your participation grade.

- Recording devices: Students may record the class for their own study purposes if they obtain prior permission from me. Such recordings are not to be made available to anyone outside of our class.

Academic Misconduct:

- The stakes: You have a lot to lose if found to have committed academic misconduct. Misconduct during your undergraduate years may be recorded and submitted to future potential employers and institutions for post-graduate study. If you plan to apply to law school or grad school, you should realize that your academic misconduct could prevent you from being accepted, or from pursuing your desired profession later (e.g. practicing law). It is therefore critical that you familiarize yourself with UW’s policies and procedures governing academic misconduct:
http://students.wisc.edu/saja/misconduct/UWS14.html

- Plagiarism: Any intentional attempt to claim the work or efforts of another person without authorization or citation constitutes academic misconduct. This includes cutting and pasting text from the web without quotation marks or proper citation, or paraphrasing from the web (or any other source) without referring to the original. If I suspect that you have plagiarized, I may penalize you in grading your assignment. Alternatively or in addition, I may pursue disciplinary measures.

- Other forms of misconduct: Because I grade on a curve, any cheating by classmates will affect your grade directly. If you believe that a classmate is cheating or committing any other kind of academic misconduct, report it to me.
