Course Description:
This research seminar explores the history of South Asians who migrated from the Indian subcontinent to different parts of the British empire over which “the sun never set” from the mid-nineteenth century onwards. They served in a variety of roles within the colonial economic structures of different British colonies as indentured laborers on plantations, contract labor in the construction of railways, and financiers and traders who facilitated the spread of colonial rule. During the first 10 weeks students will learn through weekly assigned readings and discussions about Indian traders in East Africa and Southeast Asia; Indian indentured laborers in Fiji, Mauritius and the Caribbean; Indian political activism and the making of a “mahatma” (Gandhi) in South Africa; African and Indian political collaboration in Kenya; and the post-colonial expulsion of South Asians from East Africa to Britain in the late 1960s-early1970s. Students will be introduced to a range of historiographical works that shift away from histories of South Asia and colonialism that are anchored to territorial boundaries. They will also read two works of postcolonial fiction, an important genre of literature, relating to the themes of identity, colonialism, migration and multiculturalism. Through the assigned readings students will be urged to think about the varied, comparative and connected transregional experience of colonial rule from the perspective of the South Asian diaspora across the British Empire. They are expected to write one long 20 page research paper based on primary sources and secondary literature on a topic related to the course. Students will work towards this from early in the semester but especially after the pre-assigned readings have been discussed in class.

Please Note: The history department reserves the right to collect information, including copies of papers, for the purposes of assessing and improving this course and the major
Assignments:
1) All students are required to attend the Library Workshop organized by the History Department for which you have to pre-register at:
   The workshop is being offered on September 20, 22, 26 & 28 from 6pm to 7:30pm

2) From Week III onwards students will write a 3-page (double spaced) response paper on the assigned source. Please refer to the response paper guidelines on the course website for this exercise.

3) From Week III onwards students will be divided into teams of two to lead discussion on the week’s topic and present their analysis of the assigned primary source. They will circulate two discussion questions that should be emailed to me by noon on the Wednesday before class.

4) One-page research proposals identifying the final paper topic and possible primary sources are due in class on 10/27

5) Students are required to set up individual meetings with me (on November 7, 8 & 9) to discuss their research. Please bring the final primary sources you are planning to use to this meeting.

6) Students will be paired up to present first drafts of their paper (10 minutes) and comment on another student’s paper (5 minutes) on December 1 & 8. First drafts should be received by me and the commentator by 5pm on 11/28

7) Final Papers due by 5pm on 12/15

Evaluation:
Attendance and active class participation: 15%
Response papers: 15%
Discussion Lead, Paper Presentation and Peer Commentary: 10%
Final Paper: 60%
Unexplained absences taken without the instructor’s prior permission and failure to submit assignments on time will result in a deduction from the overall letter grade.
