This course explores the dramatic life of Marie-Antoinette as a window into pre-revolutionary France and the French Revolution. We will study Marie-Antoinette not only as a historical actor, but also as a symbol and a mythic figure. Even before 1789, why does she become a lightning rod of scandal and outrageous sexual politics at the court of Versailles? How does hatred of the Queen become intertwined with the fall of the Monarchy? And what can studying Marie-Antoinette tell us about why France launched a radical Revolution? We will also use her experiences during the Revolution itself to examine pivotal, political issues during this astonishing moment in history. The Queen’s personal trajectory was bound up with key turning points of the Revolution. Notably, studying her fate raises questions about popular activism, gender politics, monarchy and democracy, international geopolitics and war, and the Terror. Via the Queen’s life, we will discuss those issues more broadly in revolutionary France. Finally, we will look at representations of Marie-Antoinette into the more modern era, particularly in film. Why does her memory have such ability to fascinate people after more than 200 years?

The major purpose of the seminar is to offer students the opportunity to do a primary-source research paper on any issue to do with Marie-Antoinette or her era. Students can write on diverse topics, including issues not raised in our collective reading. Sources can include pamphlets, memoirs, personal letters, novels or other literary sources, political manifestos, travelogues, newspapers, moral or medical treatises, works of diplomatic or military theory, political caricature, etc. During the first half of the course, we will do some background reading and sample a variety of primary sources. The second half of the course will be devoted to researching and writing your papers, and also discussing each other's research projects.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS: The central requirement of this course is a research paper (c. 20-25 pp.) on a topic related to Marie-Antoinette or a related aspect of the late Old Regime or revolutionary era. Choice of topic and compilation of bibliography will begin early in the semester, and the second half of the semester will focus primarily on the research and writing of the paper. Short assignments earlier in the semester will be oriented toward preparing you for this final paper. These short assignments include: a 5-page paper analyzing primary material, due on Monday, Sept. 28; a two-page proposal; a bibliography; an outline; an oral presentation of your project. Rough drafts of the final paper are due on Monday, Nov. 23. You will be share them and discuss them in peer review groups. Final paper is due Dec. 14. Participation in seminar discussions is also a crucial requirement of the course.

READING: We will be using the text, Evelyne Lever, Marie-Antoinette: The Last Queen of France (NY, 2000), which you can buy online. It has also been placed on reserve at H.C. White. Other required articles and documents are in a packet available at the Copy Center at 6120 Sewell Hall (the Social Sciences Building) or on reserve in H.C. White. Except for the Lever text, all of the collective reading is contained in this course packet.
Writing, Research, and The History Lab: New this semester, the History Lab is a resource center where experts (PhD students) can aid you as you write your history papers. We will devote considerable course time to discussing writing, and I will be meeting with you individually to talk about research and writing. In addition, you can take advantage of one-on-one consultations with the History Lab staff at any stage in the writing process. Sign up for a one-on-one consultation online: http://go.wisc.edu/hlab.
