Assignments and Examinations:

There will be two examinations, a mid-term scheduled for Oct. 11th, and a final examination at the conclusion of the course. These examinations will be a combination of essay questions and short identification questions. Either similar study questions or the precise questions will be handed out in class prior to each examination.

In addition to the examinations, there will be one short (3-6 pages) writing assignment handled through the discussion sections. This will be an essay-review of one of the books listed above under "texts," excluding Bedford & Colburn and Davidson & Lytle. We will give you a sample format and the due date for this assignment in the discussion sections.

Discussion Sections and Grading:

Students will attend two lectures (75 minutes each) and one required discussion section (50 minutes) per week. A Teaching Assistant will lead the discussion sections which will focus on the reading assignments for the course, although time also will be devoted to clearing-up any mysteries or absurdities advanced in lectures.

Grades will depend upon performance on the examinations, the short essay-review, and attendance at and participation in the required discussion sections. Steady improvement in quality of performance over the semester will find its reward in the final grade.

We consider the study of history as more than dreary memorization and dull regurgitation of facts. Some factual knowledge, of course, is necessary, but we are more concerned about your grasp of broad themes and the processes of historical change. We will evaluate your work on its blend of necessary factual information and thought-filled analyses of the issues.
