PRELIMINARIES

This course is intended to introduce students to the three Abrahamic religions, Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. No prior knowledge is necessary.

It is our goal that, at the end of the semester, each student will have a better understanding of all three of these traditions which shape our world. Lectures will introduce the sacred texts, history, rituals, and understandings of the self of each tradition. While lectures do not directly address the readings, they are intended to provide students with various contexts – ways of entering – each week's readings. Students are, therefore, strongly encouraged, but not required to attend lectures.

All students are required to participate in weekly discussion of assigned texts in section. In section, students will encounter a number of different kinds of texts from each tradition and learn various methods of close reading. In the first class meeting, your discussion leader will give you the specific requirements of your section, including class presentations and paper assignments. This is a CommB course. Students, therefore, are required to complete oral and written assignments, which are due in section. No late papers will be accepted.

📖 The Course Reader [CR] is available at Bob's Copy Shop, 616 University Avenue. Augustine's Confessions, the one book required, is available for purchase at UBS. The Qur'an reading is available online at <http://www.hti.umich.edu/relig/koran>. For students who wish to purchase their own copy of the Torah, I strongly recommend Robert Alter's new and quite beautiful translation, The Five Books of Moses. The course will use the Revised Standard Version, should students wish to purchase their own copy of the Bible. The RSV is also available online: <http://www.hti.umich.edu/r/rsv/>. Students who wish to purchase their own copy of the Qur'an are urged to consult with faculty in Islamic Studies.

Over the course of the semester, we shall also be showing movies (🎬), at times and dates to be determined, as well as making DVDs available for groups who cannot make the larger screen showing. The movies are strongly recommended, but not required.
