At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.

At least one history seminar course chosen to cover a logical segment of European or American history. Students may not be in history majors may still take any of the courses approved by the Department Chairperson for the major with the exception of the Senior Honors Thesis (HIST 491, 492). Development projects teaching students to complete three of these courses must deal with the size of the class, but not from the History Department.
Liberation, the social, economic and cultural forces shaping the evolution and development of the modern twentieth century).

62 The Intellectual Foundations of Waddy, Drury and Okonkwo and Their Influence on the Evolution which shaped the political and social consciousness of the contemporary African world. (Also African History of the twentieth century. Emphasis on the role of politics and political parties.) P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

63 History of Modern South America: Selected
This course includes the revolutions in the Andean and political systems. Regional coverage includes Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, Costa Rica, Bolivia, Brazil and Uruguay. Emphasis on the role of political, economic and social factors. P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

65 History of Brazil. Sect. 4. cr. 4: (S·A) The evolution of Brazil's social, economic, and political ideologies since the formation of the Portuguese Empire in 1808. Focuses on the role of political, economic and social factors.
P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

66 History of Mexico: The Colonial Period. Sect. 4. cr.
5: (S·A) Economic, social, and political development of Mexico from the conquest to the independence. Emphasis on the role of political, economic and social factors.
P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

67 The Mexican Revolution: Background, Development, and Consequences. Sect. 4. cr.: (S·A) The Mexican Revolution of 1910-1920. Focuses on the role of political, economic and social factors. P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

550 Advanced History of Latin America. Sect. 4. cr.
6: (S·A) Advanced study of Latin American history, focusing on the role of political, economic and social factors.
P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

555 Undergraduate Seminar in History. Sect. 4. cr.
5: (S·A) Seminar on specific topics. Topics and period of emphasis of each section are to be determined by the Instructor. P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

557 The Mexican Revolution: Background, Development,
and Consequences. Sect. 4. cr.: (S·A) The Mexican Revolution of 1910-1920. Focuses on the role of political, economic and social factors. P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.

571 History of Science from Seventeenth Century to Early Twentieth Century. Sect. 4. cr.: (S·A) History of science in the seventeenth century to the early twentieth century, focusing on the role of intellectual and cultural factors. P. J. or cons inst. Okonkwo.