Course Description
This class introduces students to the rewarding work of historians through an in-depth investigation into a difficult, controversial, and often painful, topic: the Eastern Front during World War II. We’ll begin by thinking about what it means to “think like a historian” and by discussing how we should sensitively approach this particular topic. We’ll then dive into three weeks of primary source analysis, looking at the experiences of a range of people under Nazi and Soviet rule. In the third part of the class, we’ll explore three key questions that historians continue to debate: How did the Holocaust happen in Eastern Europe? To what extent did local people collaborate? And can we conceive of German victimhood? Finally, we’ll discuss questions of memory and historical judgment. How can historians analyze the ways in which various people, both collectively and individually, have remembered and memorialized the violent experiences of war through postwar trials, oral testimonies, monuments, and museums? The class will use the topic of the Eastern Front as a lens through which to debate issues of collaboration, resistance, memory, trauma, and historical empathy, as well as wider questions about how studying history can help us to make sense of the world in which we live.

Course Objectives

Since this is a Communications B class, as well as a gateway class for the History Major, we'll spend a lot of time focusing on process as well as content. There is no exam, so you will not be asked to memorize and then regurgitate content from lecture. Instead, I have designed the class so that each of the assignments builds upon the previous one, allowing you to walk through the process of doing historical research and writing, step-by-step. All of this work will culminate in a final research paper in which you will demonstrate the skills of summarizing and analyzing sources, creating historical questions, carrying out original research, and persuasively presenting your own ideas. The final paper will also give you the exciting opportunity to choose the topic that most interests you and to act as a historical detective as you track down sources and contribute to key historiographical debates. As you'll see from the syllabus, lectures will be complemented with discussions, trips to the various resources on campus, including the Wisconsin Historical Society and Memorial Library, and an in-class movie screening.

Credit Hours

This 4-credit course meets as a group for 4 hours per week (according to UW-Madison’s credit hour policy, each lecture counts as 1.5 hours and each discussion counts as an hour). The course also carries the expectation that you will spend an average of at least 2 hours outside of class for every hour in the classroom. In other words, in addition to class time, plan to allot an average of at least 8 hours per week for reading, writing, and preparing for discussions.

Methods of Assessment

Your work for the class will be assessed in four ways:

1. Several short assignments (25% of total grade) that help you to develop the skills necessary for completing the research paper.
2. Two oral presentations (15% of total grade) that you will deliver in section. The first will be delivered in Week 10; the second will be delivered in either Week 13 or 14.
3. Discussion participation (30% of total grade). Chad will discuss his participation grading criteria with you during section. You will also be expected to take part in small-group work and class discussions during lecture time.
4. Final research paper (30% of total grade) that you will submit in both draft and final form. More details will be provided as the semester progresses. The final grade will reflect the quality of the final paper, your responsiveness to feedback, and your ability to articulate what you have learned through the process.

Accessing course materials

All readings on this syllabus can be found in the course reader.

The course reader can be purchased from the Copy Center in the Social Science Building (see below for more information). Please note that a copy of the course reader will also be available on reserve at College Library.
Located at:
Sewell Hall, Room 6120
1180 Observatory Drive
Madison, WI 53706
262-5396

Email:
copycenter@ls.wisc.edu

Optional book for purchase:
- Mary Lynn Rampolla, A Pocket Guide to Writing in History (Boston and New York: Bedford/St. Martins, 2017)—this is the information about the ninth edition but any edition of the book is fine). This book is recommended, but not required, reading. It’s a handy guide to many of the topics that we’ll be discussing in our course and a great reference to have next to you when you plan and write your work.

Weekly Schedule and Reading Assignments

Part I: What do Historians do?

Week 1: Introductions

Lecture 1 (01/22): Why the Eastern Front? Course Introductions

Lecture 2 (01/24): What Does it Mean to “Think Like a Historian”?

Note that this session will also feature a half-hour presentation and discussion with Professor Anna Muller (University of Michigan—Dearborn), a former curator at the Museum of the Second World War in Gdansk, Poland.

No sections and no assigned readings in Week 1

Week 2: Listening and Reading with a Purpose

Lecture 1 (01/29): The Pre-History of the Eastern Front

Lecture 2 (01/31): “They Say….”: The DNA of a Good Argument

Reading for lecture:
Part II: Primary Sources

Week 3: Primary Source Analysis I

Lecture 1 (02/05): The Germans in Poland: 1939-1941

Lecture 2 (02/07): Primary Sources and Creating Historical Questions

Readings for section:

Assignment for section:
SHORT ASSIGNMENT #2:
- Read ALL of the sources for discussion. Choose ONE source for your analysis. Write (a) two-three sentences summarizing the source’s content; (b) a two-three sentence analysis, stating what you know about the context in which the source was produced and how it may affect the source’s approach.

Week 4: Primary Source Analysis II

Lecture 1 (02/12): The Soviets in Poland, 1939-1941

Lecture 2 (02/14): Trip to Memorial Library
Please bring your laptops to this session so that you can work on an in-class assignment.
Readings for section:

Assignment for section:
SHORT ASSIGNMENT #3:
- Write ONE historical question for the collection of children’s depositions as a whole. Explain briefly (two-three sentences) why you think this is a good historical question, using the criteria that we discussed in Week 3, Lecture 2.

Week 5: Primary Source Analysis III: The War after 1941

Lecture 1 (02/19): A Front Ripe for Atrocity

Lecture 2 (02/21): Analyzing Film and Newspapers as Sources

Readings for section:

Assignment for section:
SHORT ASSIGNMENT #4:
- Hand in completed library assignment from Week #4.

Part III: Historical Debates: Collaboration, Resistance, Victimhood

Week 6: The Holocaust in German debates

Lecture 1 (02/26): How did the Holocaust happen?

Lecture 2 (02/28): Trip to the Wisconsin Historical Society Library and Archives
Readings for section:
- Arad et al., eds., Documents on the Holocaust, 22-30.

Assignment for section:
SHORT ASSIGNMENT #5:
- In 150 words, summarize the “functionalist v. intentionalist” debate. Then choose ONE of the documents from either of the document collections and—in another 150 words—explain the extent to which your document supports one side or the other.

Week 7: Local Agency?

Lecture 1 (03/05): Collaboration: The Case of Jedwabne

Lecture 2 (03/07): Resistance: Two Uprisings in Warsaw

Readings for section:

Assignment for section:
SHORT ASSIGNMENT #6:
- In your opinion, what is the most important point of contestation between Gross and his critics? Use at least one quotation from the texts in your discussion. (300 words in total).

Week 8: German Victims?

Lecture 1 (03/12): Were the Germans Victims too?

Lecture 2 (03/14): Postwar: A Brutalized Population
Readings for section:

Assignment for section:
DRAFT PROPOSAL:
- Come to section with a provisional research proposal. Your proposal should include: a) your research question, as well as a three-sentence explanation of why you think this is a good research question; b) a short annotated bibliography with at least two secondary sources and two primary sources that you think might be helpful. The annotated bibliography should include a short description of the source and an explanation of how it will help you to explore your historical question.

*SPRING BREAK

PART IV: Postwar Reckonings and Memorialization

Week 9: Judgments

Lecture 1 (03/26): In the Courtroom: The Nuremberg trial

Lecture 2 (03/28): Eichmann, Gröning, and the Pursuit of Nazi War Criminals

Readings for section:

Week 10: Memory and Victims

Lecture 1 (04/02): Resistance at Treblinka and its Legacies (Guest Lecture by Chad Gibbs)

REVISED RESEARCH PROPOSAL: Using Chad’s feedback from the previous assignment, complete a revised proposal. Include a couple of sentences explaining what you have revised. You should turn in a hard copy in class AND upload a copy on Canvas.
Lecture 2 (04/04): NO LECTURE: Students work in their own time on preparing oral presentations

Assignment for section:
- ORAL PRESENTATION #1: Students spend section briefly presenting their revised research proposals.

Week 11: Collective Memory I

Lecture 1 (04/09): Holocaust testimonies: Written and Oral accounts

Lecture 2 (04/11): In-class Movie Screening: Ida (Paweł Pawlikowski, 2013)

Reading for section:

Assignment for section:
- PLAN OF PAPER: You should bring a plan of your essay to section. It should include a provisional thesis statement and plans for each paragraph, including supporting evidence/quotations/paraphrasing for at least one paragraph.

Week 12: Collective Memory II

Lecture 1 (04/16): Remembering the “Great Patriotic War”

Lecture 2 (04/18): Memorials in the Region and Beyond
Readings for section:

Assignment due on Friday, April 19 at Noon:
FIRST DRAFT OF FINAL PAPER. You should turn in a hard copy to Chad’s mailbox (#4043) AND upload a copy on Canvas.

Week 13: Revisions and Improvements

Lecture 1 (04/23): How to Revise a Paper

Lecture 2 (04/25): Back to the Bloodlands?
(Re)read before lecture:
- Snyder and Gross articles from Week 2.

Assignment for section:
- ORAL PRESENTATION #2: Students spend section briefly presenting their research.

Week 14: Conclusions

Lecture 1 (04/30): Final Class Activities

Lecture 2 (05/02): NO LECTURE: Individual consultations with Chad and/or Professor Ciancia about papers

Assignment for section:
- ORAL PRESENTATION #2: Students spend section briefly presenting their research.

FINAL PAPER DUE ON MONDAY, MAY 6, AT NOON. You should turn in a hard copy to Chad’s mailbox (#4043) AND upload a copy on Canvas.
APPENDIX A: Class Policies and Further Resources

Office Hours
My office hours are posted at the top of the syllabus. Please come by! This time is set-aside specifically for students, and I would be happy to discuss any aspect of the class with you. If you are unable to make these times, please send me an email so that we can set up a mutually convenient appointment time.

Class Etiquette
There is no laptop use in class and you must make sure that all devices with a screen are switched off or put on silent for the duration of the lecture. Come and speak with me if you are concerned about this policy.

We will begin lectures on time, so please make sure that you arrive a few minutes early. Persistent tardiness (as well as going AWOL!) leads to a lower participation grade.

If there are any assigned readings for lecture or section, you should bring them with you to class. You can participate fully only if you have access to the texts.

Papers and Assignments
Papers should be turned in on time to avoid a grade penalty. If there is a problem, it is important that you speak to Professor Ciancia or Chad in plenty of time prior to the deadline. Late papers will be penalized by a grade per day.

All assignments—including the short assignments—should be submitted by the deadline marked on the syllabus in BOTH hard and electronic copy. The electronic copy should be uploaded as a Word document onto the course’s Canvas site. These two documents must be identical. Unless otherwise agreed, email submissions will not be accepted.

You should clearly post the word count (along with your name, section day/time, etc.). All assignments should stick within the word limit to avoid a grade penalty.

Historians use the Chicago Manual of Style, which can be found online at www.chicagomanualofstyle.org. See also A Pocket Guide to Writing in History for more details.

Academic Honesty
There is information about what constitutes plagiarism here (http://writing.wisc.edu/Handbook/QPA_plagiarism.html), but please come and speak with Professor Ciancia or Chad during office hours if you have questions or concerns.

Disabilities
Disability guidelines for course accommodations may be found at the UW McBurney Disability Resource Center site: http://www.mcburney.wisc.edu/. Please come and see Professor Ciancia or Chad if you would like to talk further.

Religious Observance Policy
Students must notify Professor Ciancia within the first two weeks of class of the specific days or dates on which they request relief.
Writing Resources and Guidelines

The University’s Writing Center is a wonderful resource that allows you to work with a consultant to improve your written work. Take a look at their website (http://www.writing.wisc.edu/index.html) for more information.

The History Lab is a resource center where experts (PhD students) will assist you with your history papers. No matter your stage in the writing process, History Lab staff will help you sharpen your skills and become a more successful writer. In addition to helping you with the specifics of writing in the discipline of history, the experts at the lab will also provide assistance in terms of your writing style (including for non-native speakers of English).
APPENDIX B:
The Historian’s Craft: Objectives for All Classes

Please find below the official criteria for The Historian’s Craft. As we go through the class, I will highlight the various skills that we are working on. Please remember that you won’t be able to work on all of these skills at once, so I have sequenced them in a way that makes sense.

1. Ask Questions: develop the habit of asking questions, including questions that may generate new directions for historical research.
   a) Develop historical questions through engagement with primary sources, secondary literature, and/or broader ethical, theoretical, or political questions.
   b) Ask historical questions to guide individual research.
   c) Pose questions to prompt productive group discussion.

2. Find Sources: learn the logic of footnotes, bibliographies, search engines, libraries, and archives, and consult them to identify and locate source materials.
   a) Identify the purposes, limitations, authorities, and parameters of various search engines available both through the library and on the world-wide web.
   b) Take advantage of the range of library resources, including personnel.
   c) Locate printed materials, digital materials, and other objects.
   d) Be aware of, and able to use, interlibrary loan.

3. Evaluate Sources: determine the perspective, credibility, and utility of source materials.
   a) Distinguish between primary and secondary material for a particular topic.
   b) Determine, to the extent possible, conditions of production and preservation.
   c) Consider the placement of sources in relation to other kinds of documents and objects.
   d) Identify the perspective or authorial stance of a source.
   e) Summarize an argument presented in a text.
   f) Distinguish between the content of a source and its meaning in relation to a particular question.

4. Develop and Present an Argument: use sources appropriately to create, modify, and support tentative conclusions and new questions.
   a) Write a strong, clear thesis statement.
   b) Revise and rewrite a thesis statement based on additional research or analysis.
   c) Identify the parts of an argument necessary to support a thesis convincingly.
   d) Cite, paraphrase, and quote evidence appropriately to support each part of an argument.

5. Plan Further Research: draw upon preliminary research to develop a plan for further investigation.
   a) Write a research proposal, including a tentative argument, plan for research, annotated bibliography, and abstract.
   b) Identify the contribution of an argument to existing scholarship.

6. Communicate Findings Effectively: make formal and informal, written and oral presentations tailored to specific audiences.

a) Write a clearly argued, formal academic paper, using appropriate style and bibliographic apparatus.

b) Deliver a concise, effective, formal verbal presentation with appropriate supporting material.

c) Contribute constructively to discussion, whether proposing or responding to an idea.