This course will focus on the social, cultural, and political history of France from the late seventeenth century through the French Revolution. We will pay particular attention to recent historiographical debates over method. We will study recent work on the French Revolution, and various approaches to state-building, colonization and transnational dynamics, the Enlightenment and public sphere, gender, and political culture.

All books marked with an asterisk should be available at the University Bookstore. All of the books are on reserve in HC White. There is also a crucial packet of all the other articles and chapters. It is available in the Humanities Copy Center at 6120 Sewell Hall (Social Sciences).

Requirements: Each student will choose between two different options for the course's written work: 1.) write three medium-length papers (c. 10 p.) which will analyze and critique historiographical or methodological issues raised by the readings; OR 2.) write two short (5-6 p.) reviews or think pieces on method, and one long final paper (c. 20 p.) on a pertinent historiographical or methodological issue. In either of these options, if it is appropriate, one paper may be a research proposal on a topic chosen by the student. Students will also be responsible for leading the discussions in certain weeks.

Credit Hours and Work Load: The credit standard for this 3-credit course is met by an expectation of a total of 135 hours of student engagement with the course’s learning activities (at least 45 hours per credit or 9 hours per week), which include regularly scheduled meeting times (group seminar meetings of 115 minutes per week), dedicated time reading, writing, individual consultations with the instructor, and other student work as described in the syllabus.

Course Goals and Learning Outcomes: Students will increase their expertise in early modern and French revolutionary history; develop their ability to think theoretically and engage with diverse historiographical methods; deepen their written and oral skills as professional historians; analyze and reflect on deep-rooted and varied human issues, still present today, such as, Why is so difficult to create democracy and equality? Is violence ever justified to overcome oppression or injustice? What are the responsibilities of historians in presenting and interpreting complex historical problems?
