Course Description

From the Boxer Rebellion, to the dropping of the atomic bombs, to the nuclear stand-off with North Korea, American foreign relations with East Asia during the 20th century were as consequential as they were controversial. This course will survey the issues and questions that alternately made allies and enemies of these nations: How did the quest for markets influence American policy towards China? How did European imperialism shape Japan's rise? Why did communism seem to offer a more compelling economic and political arrangement to China and North Korea? While squarely rooted in East Asia this course will also explore the questions that united and divided Americans over their nation's Asian policy. Is the United States an empire? Is international cooperation or unilateral action more effective? When is intervening in the affairs of a sovereign state justified, if ever? Should democracy be promoted under all circumstances? This course will address these and many other questions and expect students to develop their own answers and construct their own narrative of the relationship between the United States and East Asia. This task requires that students read critically, think analytically, and engage each other in thoughtful and respectful debate. Only in community can we gain the perspectives necessary for a critical understanding of this history. By the end of this course students are not expected to have reached the same conclusions or to have developed a "correct" narrative, but they should be able to offer insightful explanations of this history and a sophisticated understanding of the current state of relations between the United States and East Asia.

Learning Outcomes

Undergraduate

¹ This class meets for three, 50-minute class periods each week over the fall/spring semester and carries the expectation that students will work on course learning activities (reading, writing, problem sets, studying, etc) for about 2 hours out of the classroom for every class period. The syllabus includes additional information about meeting times and expectations for student work.

- Identify and summarize the important features and major periods in the history of US–East Asian Relations
- Identify and summarize the major foreign relations objectives of China, Japan, North Korea, South Korea, and the United States during the major historical periods of the 20th century
- Explain and evaluate how these societies have viewed each other during periods of conflict and cooperation
- Describe how people-to-people connections have shaped these relationships beyond their government's intentions
- Use historical knowledge to evaluate current trends in the relationships between these states

Graduate

- Identify and summarize the important features and major periods in the history of US–East Asian Relations
- Identify and summarize the major foreign relations objectives of China, Japan, North Korea, South Korea, and the United States during the major historical periods of the 20th century
- Identify and summarize major trends and schools of interpretation in the historiography of US-East Asian relations
- Become proficient in the form, style, and conventions of an academic book review

Attendance

Students are required to attend all course meetings as indicated in the syllabus and attendance will be taken by sign-in sheet at the beginning of every class. Please arrive on time for all course meetings and be prepared to fully participate. Failure to do so will be damaging to your participation grade, but more importantly it will sap the potential of this course to be an intellectually engaging experience for you and others. Every student is entitled to three absences without penalty. Subsequent absences will reduce your maximum possible participation grade by 2.5 percentage points per absence. For example:

Absences	Maximum Possible Participation Grade
1-3	25%
4	22.5%
5	20%
6	17.5%

Office Hours

I will hold in-person office hours on Wednesdays from 1:30-3:30pm. Please use the following Google doc to sign up. If I have no appointments by the beginning of lecture on Wednesday, I may not be in my office. If this time slot does not work for you, please contact me and we can make other arrangements.

Participation

Your participation is an important part of this course and is essential to creating the communal learning environment we are seeking. Participation in lecture means active listening, note taking, and refraining from activities that are likely to distract you and students around you, such as doing anything on your computer apart from note taking. Participation also means coming to class having fully read the material and prepared to engage with your classmates and instructor. To that end you are required to write weekly postings, take weekly reading quizzes, and engage in peer review of your classmates' essays.

Weekly Posting (every Thursday)

Starting with week two, you will be expected to post two analytical questions (2-3 sentences each) to the course's online discussion board by 11:59pm each Thursday. These questions may draw on material covered in lecture, but must also incorporate the readings assigned in the syllabus. Use these questions to demonstrate your critical thinking and to show that you are engaging with the course readings. These questions serve as an evaluation tool, making sure that you are engaging with the readings, and also as a platform for you to present your own concerns and areas of interest. You are encouraged to read and comment on each other's questions, thus beginning a conversation before class. This assignment may be modified on a weekly basis at the discretion of the instructor. Students failing to post more than 3 times will see a 2.5% deduction in their participation grade. Additional failures to post may lead to further deductions.

Weekly Reading Quiz (every Friday)

Prior to lecture each Friday, all students will be required to complete an online reading quiz through this course's Canvas webpage. These quizzes will have a strictly enforced 3-minute time limit and will cover the readings for that week. If you have done the reading, these quizzes will be very easy. Students falling below a 75% quiz average for the course will see a 2.5% deduction in their participation grade.

Peer Review

Students are required to offer feedback on drafts of their classmates' essays three times during the semester on the dates indicated in the syllabus. Failure to engage in peer review (either by failing to give feedback or failing to provide a draft) will result in a 1% deduction in your participation grade.

Essays

Song of Ariran Essay

All students will write a 1,200 word essay on Kim's Song of Ariran in response to the question:

What is Kim San Fighting For?

Your essay must be uploaded to the course dropbox as MS Word files by 11:00 am on Day 12.

Your essay must include the following:

- Begin your essay with a paragraph that summarizes the book. The final line of this paragraph should contain your thesis statement.
- Use 2-3 specific examples from the book that support your thesis.
- Use 2-3 concepts from class lectures in your essay. These should be in bold in the text.
- You must include an analysis of both the strengths and weaknesses of this book.

Midterm Essay

The midterm essay question will be distributed on Day 17 at the end of lecture and must be uploaded to the course Canvas page as MS Word files by 11:00 am on Day 20. Late submissions will not be accepted. The essay will consist of one broad interpretive question that covers course material up to that point. Your answers should be 1200 words. Along with the question will be a list of terms, ideas, authors, etc. that must be included in your answer. You are encouraged to discuss the question together and to brainstorm possible answers, but your submitted answer must be solely your own. You will be strictly held to the university's policies regarding plagiarism and academic misconduct, which can be found at <http://students.wisc.edu/saja/misconduct/UWS14.html>.

Final Essay

The final essay will be distributed on Day 38 at the end of lecture and must be uploaded to the course Canvas page as MS Word files by 4:45pm, on 9 May. Late submissions will not be accepted. The essay will consist of one broad interpretive question that covers the entire course. Your answers should be 1200 words. Along with the question will be a list of terms, ideas, authors, etc. that must be included in your answer. You are encouraged to discuss the question together and to brainstorm possible answers, but your submitted answer must be solely your own. You will be strictly held to the university's policies regarding plagiarism and academic misconduct, which can be found at <http://students.wisc.edu/saja/misconduct/UWS14.html>.

Additional Book Reviews for Graduate Students

Graduate students enrolled in this course will complete a total of three book reviews throughout the semester. These books will be chosen by the student, but must be approved by the instructor in advance. These reviews should be 800–1,200 words and offer a fair assessment of both the books’ strengths and weaknesses. This assignment is intended to help graduate students prepare for their comprehensive/preliminary exams and also to hone their skills as a book reviewer. Please propose your books, and a timeline for completion by the end of week two. Book reviews are due at the end of weeks 5, 9, and 12.

Grading Breakdown

Song of Arrian Essay	15%
Participation*	25%
Midterm Essay	25%
Final Essay	35%

*All students begin the course with the full 25% participation grade. Failure to attend class, post, peer review, or/and perform well on quizzes will result in deductions as described above.

Extra Credit

Students attending East Asia-related events on campus are eligible to have their lowest quiz scores dropped according to the table below. All events on the CEAS calendar or the CEAS Facebook page are pre-approved. Non-CEAS events should be approved by me in advance. If you have attended an event, please fill out this form to get the extra credit.
