- 1) COURSE OVERVIEW & OBJECTIVES. This course introduces students to the field of “War & Society.” Within the broader field of military history, War & Society Studies ask how and why societies organize and deploy violence on their collective behalf and question the reciprocal effects of these choices upon societies over time. Reflecting the broad scope of Wisconsin’s War in Society & Culture Program (WISC) – for which this is the core graduate seminar – this course encompasses cases from antiquity to the present day and from around the world. By the conclusion of the course, students will:
 - a) Understand core concepts and historiographic debates within War & Society Studies as well as the subfield’s place within the historical development of military history more generally.
 - b) Explore seminal and recent scholarship that represents the state of the field.
 - c) Critically evaluate and contextualize these works of scholarship through oral and written forms of evaluation, including an academic review article.
 - d) Apply critical course concepts to an extended written project that furthers their scholarly interests.
 - e) Be prepared to apply the knowledge acquired to more focused studies within the War in Society and Culture Program.
- 2) EXPECTATIONS / REQUIREMENTS.
 - a) Students may take this course for 1-3 credits. The credit standard for the course is met by an expectation of at least 45 hours of student engagement with the course’s learning activities for each credit (1 credit = at least 45 hours; 2 credits = at least 90 hours; 3 credits = at least 135 hours). For all students, these activities will include group seminar meetings of 115 minutes per week. Other course activities and assignments (dedicated online time, reading, writing, field trips, individual consultations with the instructor, etc.) will vary depending on the number of credits for which a student is enrolled.
 - i) Students enrolled for 1 credit are only required to meet expectation/requirement 2b.
 - ii) Students enrolled for 2 credits will meet expectations/requirements 2b and 2c.
 - iii) Students enrolled for 3 credits will meet all expectations/requirements of this paragraph.

- b) Students must read all assigned readings (see “Course Texts/Schedule,” below), attend all meetings of the seminar and participate actively in discussion. Participation will be evaluated for quality and consistency.
- c) Students will select one recent, historiographically significant book-length work in the field of war & society war that furthers their individual research agenda. All reviews should be critical, analytical, and thoughtful. Assess the book as a work of individual scholarship and locate it in the larger body of literature. Consider and address at least three published, scholarly reviews in your own. At a minimum, reviews should provide:
 - i) Information on the author and his or her qualifications.
 - ii) A brief, general description of the organization and contents of the book.
 - iii) A statement of the purpose of the book and its thesis.
 - iv) Your critical evaluation of how successful the author is in achieving his or her goals and in persuading you of the thesis. The emphasis in each review should be on critical reading and evaluation. No book is perfect and none is worthless. The objective is to discern the strengths and weaknesses in the books you read and to place them in the context of the kinds of literature being done in the field and approaches to the various topics.
 - v) Students must submit standard bibliographical information on the book they propose to review via Canvas to Prof. Hall no later than noon, Monday, 15 September.
 - vi) The book review will not exceed 800 words and is due via email to the entire class at least 24 hours before the class meeting in which the book most appropriately falls. Students will briefly summarize the book and answer questions from fellow students during that class session.
- d) Students will prepare either a 4,000-word research paper or a mock dissertation prospectus on a subject of their own choosing, contingent on instructor approval. Projects should be conceived to further a student’s progress toward degree completion. In either case, a two-page project proposal is due via Canvas at the beginning of the week 5 class meeting, and the completed project is due via Canvas at the beginning of the week 14 class meeting.
